Valtech Hires Veteran Business Development Director to Lead Houston and Mid-Pacific Markets

Davenport to Build Teams for Agile, Digital and Staffing Solutions

DALLAS, March 16 – Valtech, a pioneering global provider of agile software development and digital technologies and services, today announced that it has hired Deborah Davenport as Business Development Director, Houston and Mid-Pacific markets, including Hawaii.

Davenport is familiar with both regions. She is a native of Hawaii and has lived in Texas for more than 20 years. Davenport will build the Valtech brand across the managed services, agile development and digital consultancy lines of business and will build a team to support the Houston and Mid-Pacific markets. Valtech, already well-established in Texas at its Dallas headquarters, brings the resources of its global presence, support and best practices to sustain the growth of these markets. As part of creating success for Valtech customers, Davenport will work in partnership with the agile and digital delivery teams, manage the staffing of services, and interface with teams for offshore delivery of services.

“I’m excited to strengthen and build relationships with customers in these markets,” Davenport said. “Valtech is already a noted valued partner for a number of the world’s largest and most admired customers. We look at ourselves as integral in building our customers’ success. We strive to be strategic advisors, resource planners and team members.”

Davenport joins Valtech after spending the past six years abroad in Beijing and Copenhagen. Previously, she was a Director of Sales and Senior Business Development Executive for Adea Solutions, a managed services and staffing solutions company based in Dallas. Valtech acquired Adea in December 2010.

“It’s great to have Deborah back in a leadership position for us,” Shouvik Battacharyya, CEO of Valtech U.S., said “Her experience working with companies across retail, manufacturing and IT industries, her energy, and her ability to proactively assist clients, puts us in a terrific position to grow these markets.”

Prior to joining Adea, Davenport was a major Account Executive with ThinkTanks WorldWide. She has also been a branch manager and account manager for EDP Contract Services and was HR Director for TESCO/Code Alarm.
